Celebrating 30 Years at Laurentian

Laurentian University's Official Student Paper

Tender Tush Response

Sir:

I have just read your "Johnson's Baby bottom" article, and now I am going to make my opinion known. Laurentian University is run by bureaucrats. Bureaucratic administrations are set up to administer to publicly funded (and usually non-profit) organizations. These organizations usually provide services to the public and are funded by taxes and user fees. This is very different from a business, which is funded by private capital investment and which expects to reap a profit through sales of a product or a service.

The point of this letter is to call attention to the responsibilities and duties of someone who is paid by the public to run a service. The primary duty (as I see it) is to run the organization in an efficient manner (as opposed to a frivolous manner) and prevent wasteful spending. In last Thursday's issue of Lambda, we see a receipt for a chair from Muirhead's that cost nearly $1300.00 (tax incl.). Personally, I (and just about everyone who has seen the article) consider this to be wasteful spending. I have this to say to the person and their supervisor(s):

1. Who are you that you can justify spending so much money on a non-public item?

2. It is the supervisors responsibility to see such an expenditure and prevent or correct it (whether its in the budget or not).

3. You can't single handedly spend your way out of the current recession.

4. Most people find that money is tight these days, so what gives?

If you worked for INCO and your job was to make money (not spend it), then fine, buy a chair and carpet with tiger skins. That's not public concern (although I wouldn't want to be in it when the CEO saw the bill...). But you don't work for INCO, you work for me, John Q. Public, and you have overspent by about $1000.00 on this particular item, and you used my money. I really suggest that you all get more responsible and take more care in your spending. If more of this keeps up, disciplinary action should be taken.

To your supervisor:
You are responsible because your subordinate made this expenditure. Get a grip on your people. If any supervisor allows waste of resources, he is not doing his job.

To the treasurer:

When you see expenses like this, investigate. Let people know that you won't stand for fiscal irresponsibility.

It has been said for quite a while that the method of budgeting is at fault. Departments should be rewarded instead of penalized for coming in under yearly budget. Put the unspent money aside and use it when large projects arise. With a little teamwork, most people will save money if they know that their department can still benefit from their savings, even if it is at a later date.

The bottom line is that people who run our University should participate in a program that doesn't allow for such wasteage. And if Muirheads is so expensive, shop around.

Sincerely,

Tony Park

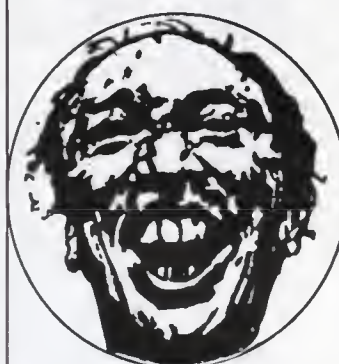

Environmental Awareness Week.
January 13-16, 1992.

Just a thank-you to everyone who helped out with the Environmental Awareness Week, the Ministry of the Environment donated the use of some of their literature on the environment as well as the Regional Municipality of Sudbury Recycling program. Thanks to the Director of Services Romeo Bertoli for arranging the use of environmental mugs for sale. Most of all a thank-you is extended to everyone who came to the display because they were interested in environmental issues. The Environmental Awareness Week Committee is a subcommittee, LUSEC. Anyone interested in volunteering their time with the committee may contact Jeff McNeil at 674-7819.

Dear Pierre Sighted

Dear Editor,

Yesterday, when I was sitting in the Great Hall watching people pocket the silverware, I overheard a conversation in which three people were discussing whether Cher Pierre was working at the Tim Horton's in the Classroom Building.

I don't know how all this came about, but ever since the apparent demise of Pierre, not only have we heard from him from "beyond the grave", but just about every issue of Lambda has had some sort of article written about this occasionally dead columnist, whether it is written by a member of your staff, or written as a letter to the Editor. Every time someone is either bitching about his death or praising it.

Why not let this guy get on with his life (or after-life)?

Now, I don't know if his death helped your circulation, or hurt it, or even if there are more people writing about him than to him. Just one thing puzzles me...

Is Cher Pierre dead, or is he working at the local Tim Horton's with Elvis???

Bond with Magazine Broken

by Fiona McCaw

McGill Daily, McGill University

MONTREAL (CUP)— Travel CUTS has decided to end distribution of the commercial magazine Looking Up in its offices.

Student newspapers and the Canadian University Press have been lobbying the Canadian Federation of Students for the past several months to end distribution. CFS owns Travel CUTS.

The Travel CUTS board of directors made the decision to end the magazine's distribution October 20, 1991.

Travel CUTS also has an agreement with Looking Up publisher Glenmont Publications to publish the travel agency's magazine, the Traveller. It was also decided at the October 20 meeting to let this contract lapse when it runs out at the end of the year.

Jocelyn Charron, CFS communications officer, said the decision was motivated by the need to protect the advertising base of student papers.

"Looking Up is not really a student publication. It is a matter of principle for CFS not to encourage the magazine and to let the advertising go to CUP (member papers)."

Charron also said CFS wanted to make it clear it was not affiliated with Glenmont Publications.

"The way it was portrayed on stands in campus, it looked as though Looking Up was a CFS publication, which was just not the case. Looking Up doesn't reflect the things that CFS is interested in and does."

Travel CUTS has removed Looking Up's logo from boxes distributing The Traveller, and has sent a letter instructing Glenmont Publications not to misrepresent their relationship with Travel CUTS.

CUP president John Montesano said he welcomed Travel CUTS' decision, but felt that it was still inadequate.

"They are still putting advertising in Looking Up," said Montesano. "They are still supporting this magazine. I'd like to see a little more action."

He also criticized the lack of student input in the deal between Glenmont publications and Travel CUTS.

"Travel CUTS and Looking Up signed the deal without communication with CFS or CUP," said Montesano. "Even if it has a minimal effect, students should still have input on this kind of stuff."

Looking Up has been vigorously opposed by student newspapers across Canada. Student journalists say the privately owned magazine has taken away advertising revenues which would otherwise have gone to student papers.

According to Wendy Fredricks, executive director of Campus Plus, CUP's national advertising co-operative, CUP papers have already lost approximately $250,000 in advertising revenue. Upjohn Pharmaceuticals and Carter Products, the makers of Trojan condoms, told Campus Plus they withdrew the advertising in favor of Looking Up, she said.

"Just the fact that these companies have been with us and are not any more is a pretty good indication of how Looking Up is hurting us," said Fredricks.

Looking Up publisher Monte Perlman said advertisers may have had other reasons than his magazine to withdraw advertising from student papers.

"We're not a threat in terms of what's out there," said Perlman. "We're not competing with student papers. We're bringing in people new to the market."

Several universities have ceased distribution of Looking Up on their campuses, including Concordia, York, Carleton, Dalhousie, and Calgary. Other universities have agreements keeping off-campus publications from being distributed on campus.

Student press hit with lawsuit

by Fiona McCaw

McGill Daily, McGill University

Canadian University Press and the organization's president, John Montesano, are being threatened with legal action from the publisher of Looking Up magazine.

Looking Up is a free magazine aimed at students, produced by Glenmont Publications, a private Montreal company. Looking Up bills itself as "Canada's campus voice," but the people who run the magazine are not students.

The lawsuit comes in the wake of a campaign by CUP member papers to remove Looking Up from college and university campuses.

"I've never been sued for so much money before," said Montesano. "Obviously they're trying to scare us."

A letter to CUP from Glenmont's lawyer says CUP has "caused irreparable damage to the reputation" of the magazine. It also says CUP illegally incited distributors of the magazine to break their contracts with Looking Up.

Glenmont is demanding $650,000 in damages, an apology and a letter of reference from CUP which states that Looking Up is "a magazine of high integrity and quality and worthy of advertising support."

Montesano said CUP will not back down.

"If people have contracts with Glenmont, then we are asking them not to break them. But we are trying to make sure that those contracts are not renewed," he said.

Student papers across the country have expressed concern that Looking Up and similar commercial magazines are threatening their survival by luring away advertisers. CUP members say campuses should be reserved for non-profit, student-run publications, and not profit driven companies.

However, Jerry Stolling of the University of Alberta's student council said Glenmont publisher Monte Perlman told him CUP had dropped its campaign against Looking Up.

Perlman also told him a letter announcing the co-operative's change in policy was forthcoming, Stolling said.

Montesano said the nothing could be further from the truth.

"We are organizing a general campaign for 1992, in support of student papers getting non-student papers off campuses."

Perlman declined to comment on the lawsuit, but said he hoped a big legal battle with CUP could be avoided.

SGA ready to act on Funding Announcement

SGA Report
Chris Land
Editor-in-Chief

An impending announcement on ways of managing Ontario's 10 billion dollar deficit from Treasurer Floyd Laugrin may include cuts to post-secondary funding, so the President of SGA is preparing to respond to the government's actions when they are announced. There is some likelihood that cuts in Ontario government spending on postsecondary education may lead to a 40% increase in tuition fees next year, placing tuition at Laurentian up around $3000. Mark Green is worried that such an increase will force some students to end their education because they won't be able to afford tuition next year. Mark will be reporting back to SGA council when the announcement comes out and will then consider some course of action. He is hoping that a lot of student will get involved in fighting against funding cuts now so that students will have access to affordable education in the future.

The SGA is also pushing for another session on strategic planning to be held to cover student and general issues. Mark Green wants people to get out to the session and make their concerns known, even if they do not have any solutions to the problems. Ideally, people making presentations should also suggest solutions to the problems that they see, but this session is intended to be more open and less formal than previous ones.

The director of Finance, Bryan Moore, reported to SGA that the revenue from the games room on student street was down significantly, but has shown improvement lately and may even out by the end of the year. As well, he reported that he had a chance to review the financial documents of Lambda and was pleased with the way that Lambda is being run. He congratulated the Financial Director of Lambda on the work that she has done this year.

Finally, the Vice President of SGA, Terri MacMillan, went over the amendments to the constitution being considered by her constitution committee. The committee is planning a revision of the SGA executive from 5 members down to 3. They would have a President, a Vice-President/Finance, and a Vice-President/Student Affairs. These three positions will be Full-Time salaried employees of SGA. One concern raised by a member of council was that the pace of the decisions on the constitutional changes was going too quickly. Terri assured the council that they will take as much time as necessary to pass these amendments. Mark Green told council that it will be necessary to pass these amendments to the constitution before the SGA election nominations come up this spring.

ACQUAINTANCE RAPE

by Scott McPhee

In Canada it is estimated that a woman is sexually assaulted every 6 minutes and raped every 17 minutes. Rape is a crime of power and violence, not of sex. Rape is defined as the act of having sexual intercourse without consent.

You are a rapist if you have sex with someone who has not consented to it.

You are a rapist if you don't stop when she says no, even though she doesn't fight back.

You are a rapist if you force a woman to have sex because you think she "owes" you after an expensive date.

You are a rapist if, after getting drunk, she goes back to your room with you and you force her to have sex with you even though she only agreed to kissing, necking or petting.

NO MEANS NO—it's as simple as that. If doesn't matter if you have had sex with her a thousand times before. NO STILL MEANS NO. It doesn't matter if she is wearing a mini-skirt or a see-through blouse or a jacket with only a bra underneath—she has the right to express herself through clothing any way she sees fit without being raped. Women don't ask for sex through the way they dress any more than men do.

Contrary to other articles that have been published in Lambda men are not animals. Men do not physically need to have sex after becoming aroused any more than women do. Men are still able to physically control themselves even after becoming sexually excited.

One of the key questions in the issues of acquaintance rape is what the difference is between sex with consent and rape. The man might feel that he has just "given her what she really wanted" but the woman believes that she was raped. The major distinction between the two is that sex with consent is voluntary, agreed upon and a situation in which the woman is fully aware of what is taking place. Sex with consent assures that no one is exploited or degraded in any way. Acquaintance rape occurs when consent is not given yet the man goes ahead and has sex with the woman anyway. If a woman is raped, eight times out of ten it is by someone she knows or has met. This is not to say, however, that one should take unnecessary risks walking alone at night.

If you are concerned about getting back to residence, to your car or leaving your office alone after hours, do not hesitate to use Laurentian's STUDENT SECURITY WALK-HOME SERVICE or SECURITY.

They can be reached at 673-2661. If you have any problems or questions about acquaintance rape or harassment, please call Laurentian's personal Harassment Officer, Norma MacRae-Ward, at 675-1151, ext. 3422 or stop by my display being held on Wednesday, Jan. 29th, from 11:30 a.m., to 2:00 p.m., in front of the library

Constitution amendment meeting will be held on:

January 9 @ 6:30 pm
16 @ 6:30 pm
19 @ 11:00 am
23 @ 6:30 pm

There will be a meeting on January 26, 1992 at 11:00 am to vote on the motions proposed to amend constitution. This meeting will be adjourned at 12:30 pm. Another meeting will commence at 1:00pm to vote again.

Laurentian University Hosts Conference on Rebirth in First Nations

The Institute of Northern Ontario Research and Development (INORD) is sponsoring its third annual conference on Friday, January 24th and Saturday, January 25th, at Laurentian University's Alphonse Raymond Building (School of Education). The theme of this conference is "Rebirth: Social, Economic and Political Development in First Nations". The presentations promise to be lively and informative.

INORD sponsors such conferences in keeping with its mandate to promote social-scientific research on subjects relating to Northern Ontario. Papers presented at this conference represent the work of researchers across the province (with strong participation by Laurentian University professor(s) and beyond. Leaders and members of First Nations communities of Northern Ontario will also take part in the conference.

The sessions will begin on Friday afternoon, January 24th, at 1:30 pm., with opening ceremonies and presentations on economic development and land use planning in Northern Ontario first Nations and a discussion on a training program in Sudbury. The Friday session will conclude with a feast and cultural event.

The conference reconvenes at 9:00 a.m., on Saturday, January 25th, with presentations on social development in first Nations. Sessions will focus on interactions between social and political developments in First Nations communities, an example of community-based development at Mississagi, a study of Canadian-style welfare colonialism, and an assessment of a support program for aboriginal youth in Winnipeg. a luncheon will follow at noon.

Beginning at 1:30 p.m., an afternoon discussion session will explore aboriginal rights and self-government. This will be followed by presentations on principles for collaboration in cross-cultural research and on cultural differences underlying tension in native-white collaborative research.

Everyone is welcome to attend this conference. Full registration, including the feast and luncheon, is $55 ($35 for students). Without meals, the fee is $15. To register, or for more information please contact INORD at Laurentian University by phoning 675-1151, ext. 3213, by January 20, 1992.

Selected papers from the conference will be published in book form.

Late Nite with Jake and L.B.

It is a cold and snowy Thursday Morning, 12:25 am. Submitted for your entertainment: A tiny two bedroom apartment, sits high atop Sudbury, and the 'wise old man' sits under the water tower. To our disappointment, our loving couple upstairs, Amy and the Rubber Man are preparing to move out. We don't know why, and the wise old man won't tell us. Could it be our retaliation to their child's agonizing screams and inexhaustable games of cops and robbers, cowboys and indians (which is quite remarkable considering there is only one kid) with our measly 800 watts of home stereo. We can only pray to every available diety for a childless couple to move in to replace them. If we get invited to their moving out party, we already have our gifts bought. For the darling little boy: Cement Shoes. For Amy: A Megaphone - We don't think the people in Chelmsford can hear her violent, yet subtle screams o' passion. and finally for The Rubber Man: A life.

Tonites topic: Living off Campus Doesn't mean your dead.

Since moving to this down-town-Shangri-La, the number of visitors and phone calls we have been getting has dwindled to almost nothing. Even Gramps doesn't stop by after work any more. When questioned about this, a few of our friends responded that they didn't know our phone number, Although it is the same number we had in res., and the operator certainly doesn't give out that kind of information.

Now we don't want to lay any blame here, and we are certainly at fault for not visiting residence that much since moving out, but we just kinda thought others wanted to get out of those surroundings as much as we did, if even just for a while. So in case you were waiting for a formal invitation, here it is. Come on over. We have Cable. We have a real fridge to put beer in. We're Lonely. Give us a call. God knows we're always around - classes are still just an inconvenience not a way of life. You can smoke, drink beer out of bottles, and watch real T.V all at the same time. How about Dinner? Jake's even learning to cook. Don't worry, L.B. doesn't let him do anything more than boil water yet, but it's an improvement.

Briefly....

Apparently Woody, having hastily gotten out of the silverware business, started on a new career this week, the pub's new freelance bouncer. Don't worry Woody, we don't think you look like a Bi-sexual.

A recent upscaling of pratcal jokes using the 1-800 numbers provided on T.V shows no sign of relenting. Thanks for the diapers Gramps. (Dial 1-800-TRY-ATTENDS)

Living in the vast wasteland some like to call downtown as we said can get very lonely, but there are a few interesting ways to eliviate the boredom of domestic life off campus. Hence this week's top ten.

Top Ten Things We Like To Do, Now That We Live Off Campus

10. Drive by Elm St. Burger King, trying to spot New sKids on the Block.
 9. Count the cop cars at the do-nut shops.
 8. Throwing things/children off our balcony onto the Kingsway.
 7. Dress shabbily, free chow at soup kitchen (Great company too)
 6. Break up dope deals by yelling "Hey, aren't those Cops!"
 5. Hang out at City Centre, spot the welfare cheats.
 4. Go to city hall, Threaten Mayor Gordon, "Give us free parking, or we'll date your daughters"
 3. Buy gun, randomly fire into the air - just to fit in with the neighbours
 2. Call 911, put THEM on hold.
 1. Make big money turning in your neighbours to Crime Stoppers.

Voice in the Crowd

by Paul Bellmore

Well, welcome once again Reader to the mildly polluted waters of my mind. Please bring your own water toy.

Firstly, I would like someone to tell me why the weeks are just clipping by? I always thought that the September to December part of the school year flew until someone told me the second half goes even faster. I think he was right. Maybe if everyone makes a serious and conscious effort to "slow down" maybe we can make the weeks drag a little bit. I guess time is the only real constant. If you really think about the prospect of time is like a human exercise in futility. Now, here I go on the old philosophical exploration. I'll tell you how it came about.

The other night (Wednesday) I was lying on my bed, staring at the ceiling playing connect -the-tangent-thought-games with myself. Well, as often happens, I started to think about the whole mess we're involved in and I started getting kind of depressed. Well, maybe not depressed but some sort of feeling of emptiness a "What's the Point" type of attitude.

So wallowing in the pity-party I had thrown for myself, I realized that it was time to attend my third year philosophy class. The class is held in the University of Sudbury in a small room and has five students enroled in it. On this night only myself and another guy showed up to study the wonders of Existantialism. It might sound as if I'm making fun of the class but it is really good, just not when you're feeling depressed. so the Professor was talking about being, Being, kant, idealism, realism, ethics and I thought my head was going to implode. so the prof seeing I was confused closed up his notes and the three of us ended up having a deep discussion on everything from history to social principles and the very fabric of society. The point is that the discussion put some life back in me. I only started thinking after that this is what education should be about. It's not about one man scribbling on an overhead in front of 300 bared students But again I'm preaching on ideal that is not practical. If the classes were smaller then they would have to cut down the numbers and that would take away from the business end of our educational system. Maybe if they did however a B.A. would be worth more than a glorified high-school diploma. Incidentally, that philosophy class is taught by Professor Berens. He will be retiring within the next few years or so and I recommend everyone to take one of his classes. He is a man of great experience and knowledge.

Well, I guess I just went off on a big run there. Anyway, back to the beginning and my point on the futility of time. Philosophy never gives answers but only poses more questions. It can magnify and clarify through new ways of thought or direction. I would like to leave you with a passage from one of the most influential and misunderstood philosophers of this century: Friedrich Nietzsche.

Life no argument. We have arranged for ourselves a world in which we are able to live-with the postulation of bodies, lines, surfaces, causes and effects, motion and rest, form and content: without these articles of faith nobody could now endure to live! But that does not mean they are something proved and demonstrated. Life is no arguement; among the conditions of life could be error.

Until words meet.....

From the Editors Desk: More Lambda Propaganda.

We are aware of the fact that there is a group of individuals out there who are very concerned about the financial health of Lambda. The executive of the SGA has already taken a look at our books and they were most satisfied and impressed. However, if there is any individuals that would like to take a look for themselves that our books are in order, we encourage they they do so. All you have to do is set an appointment with Marlene Sammon our Financial Director, like the executives of the SGA have done. You have an absolute right to do so as an SGA member since you are a financial supporter of this paper.

Word of warning though, be prepared to be impressed by the efficiency and precision of record keeping, budgeting, and spending. Marlene was the only Financial Director of any student paper in Ontario that has been chosen to the Board of Directors of the Campus Plus magazine produced by Canadian University Press. Freejack: A Movie Review

Welcome to the eerie universe of "Freejack," Morgan Creek productions' futuristic action-adventure starring EMILIO ESTEVEZ, MICK JAGGAR, RENE RUSSO and ANTHONY HOPKINS. This film is directed by GEOFF MURPHY and is distributed by WARNER BROS.

When up-and-coming race-car driver Alex Furlong (Emilio Estevez) shoehorns himself into the cockpit of his sleek Formula Atlantic, he has no premonition that his life is about to change in a mind-boggling way. Furlong's car explodes into action, scorching around the track at near record time. Suddenly, a disastrous accident occurs, and the vehicle flies into the air at 140m.p.h. But just seconds before smashing fatally, Furlong attains an even greater speed. Snatched from death, he is projected instantly into the year 2009!

Terrified, disoriented and completely mystified, Furlong finds himself running through the streets that look somewhat familiar but alarmingly different. What's even more frightening is that he is being pursued by a pack of bizarre 21st century bounty hunters ("bone-jackers"), led by a ruthless expert named Vacendak (Mick Jaggar).

This movie promises to make even the most passive of watchers sit on the edge of their seats. FREEJACK will open across Canada on January 17th. This one is a "must see".

The Boy Scout From Hell: A Movie Review

Christmas is over, the chimes and good cheer are fast becoming anachronisms. Are you craving for a heavy dose of the cruel world? Try a swallow of The Last Boy Scout. The cynicism in this movie will make you think Santa Clause is a drug pusher. Bruce Willis plays a dejected anti-hero in a playpen of sex, violence and political corruption that scarcely lets you up for anything, let alone air.

The story revolves explosively around the gambling of professional football and a quest for vengeance that turns a city red. Damon Wayans plays a discarded quarterback who is befriended by Bruce Willis, a private detective who hates himself almost as much as he hates injustice. Even the romance in the movie is tainted with the aura of a cold untrustworthy world. Take note of the words of endearment used, they will deserve your best half-smile.

ACTION must be spelled in capitals, and if you liked Die Hard, you'll worship The Last Boy Scout. Picture a guy whose cheating wife and traitorous best friend rank fifteen or sixteen on the problem list. Every line is a one-liner, and it compares favorably with the most violent movies ever made. Willis attempts to make the Terminator look like a family man.

The story is good, hard, fast and leaves nothing to the imagination. Don't wait for the video amigo, this one deserves the biggest screen they can make.

SUMMER JOB UPDATE

The Peer assistants received a complaint from a concerned student regarding soliciting within the residence. It seems a group of students pulled a fast one over a lot of students in both Single Students Residence and University College Residence. This group entered rooms and sold magazines to the residents without the student being aware he or she had bought one until it was too late.

When we contacted Paulette Lafortune she informed us that soliciting was not allowed at all in residence. When we contacted the other residences we found out that they also do not allow soliciting. So this group of individuals is going against the system by being inside the residence.

If anyone notices these individuals within their building make sure you let the person in charge know because they are probably not supposed to be there.

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned"

I am one of those people who are left wondering what the hell just happened, and yes, I do possess an incredible urge to go on a vicious venge trip and show no mercy.

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned", and although I qualify, fortunately for him, haven't the energy nor the time to put into getting even.

I see no value in rubbing someones nose in their own dirt I will not make him feel as he made me.

Instead I chose to remain in the so-be-it clan. He's a liar, a cheat, a low-down, yellow bellied coward... so-be-it!

But just to let you guys know how it feels to be betrayed, this one's for you.

Even with my attitude, even with my "forget him and get on with my life" ability I still find myself mentally exhausted and physically drained.

I patiently wait for my second wind to blow over my heart and cool that deep burning sensation that I know so well.

I feed the fire by allowing my mind to race with memories of you.

Inside my head echos your voice...such kind words that I believed to be true.

I feel foolish, but I question who is more the fool? I feel trapped in a prison of stone with no choice but to allow the cool to chill my spirit a little more.

I've put myself on trial and I alone am judge and jury. I am innocent but I feel guilty of negligence and have long since convicted myself.

I was so honest with you. I opened the door to my heart and ushered you inside.

You took advantage of my trust. I believed in you, perhaps more than I believed in myself.

You were so good at playing your role I didn't even notice the curtain fall.

And now, all I feel for you is pity. I mean can you even tell a lie from the truth?

Can you tell when you are feeling something real? Your world is but a play but you seem trapped at center stage.

Even if you wanted to escape would you have anything to hold on to?

Yes, I pity you.

It's sad to think that I cared more for the false person who blinded me than I ever could for the real you who disgusts me.

You walked into my world at a peaceful equilibrium and drown me in my own 'rivers of belief'.

Your betrayal has caused this little ache in my heart where once you were so carefully placed.

I don't feel the need to show you the error of your ways for surely you must know.

But when darkness falls and night takes her reign, how do you sleep?

When you close your eyes and put your hands behind your head, how can you feel worthy of another's admiration when you stole mine like a common criminal.

Once believed you had a heart of gold, I now question its simple existence.

Tonight I ride out the storm you created, so I may reach the calm and return to my rivers.

Are you so blind that you cannot see the hurt you inflict or are you so dead inside that you must prey on another's beauty to feel alive?

But do you know what's really strange, what eats me up inside is that although I know the depth of your deception, I'm still going to miss you.

So you see guys, I am not a one-liner participant of the eat-me beat-me generation.

And when someone invades my mind they become a part of my very existence. So the next time you feel the need to spread your poison, think about who you are feeding it to.

If you would allow someone to reach inside you and open your eyes as much as you have done to others, you'd be amazed at what you'd see.

There is so much out there, and by living the simple side of life, you're cheating yourself complex feelings that make us feel alive.

Give up the facade and look around, feel all you can before life passes you by.

Blood, Sweat, and Saliva, But No One Left To Cry To

Step right up, come one, come all, and more take shelter as the calm becomes the storm and white doth become black with serpent's kiss the exercise of introspective bliss; the storyline for my pathetic play always reads exactly the same way their starring roles, the players which I've cast sometimes I'm sorry that they never last it's funny how it always ends the same the role reversal in our little game the Queen, sadly enough, becomes the pawn the heat of night becomes the break of dawn and ugly truths of sugar-coated lies exist within the tears of crying eyes. It's a shame that some choose to pretend all good things always come to an end.

Women's Basketball VEEctorious

Laurentian Lady Vees were 64-51 winners over the York Yoewomen Friday night in an excellent end to end match. It was a very close match in the first half but the Vees over powered in the second. The phenomenal Sue Stewart #7 led the attack with 26 points, Martha Sandilands followed closely behind with 21. Excess fouls for the Yoewomen made up the difference in the game. Very few shots were made from the outsides - a lot of inside battling made this game aggressive. More fan support is needed!

Live from Sudbury, this is SPADLINE. The lads kick off this week by offering congratulations to the pride of Tottenham, an ex SPAD himself, D'Arcy Ronan, who was the first winner of a TRIVIA MASTER t-shirt in '92.

Answers to last week's trivia #13 were Wimbledon as the only major Monica Seles didn't win last year, Bill Parcells as the first recipient of a Gatorade shower, and Devil's coach Tom Mcvie as the quotable one.

In SPAD news, the hockey, hook shots, and hurling to be held on Friday, February 28. Also, don't forget the SPAD hockey tournament goes this weekend at the Sudbury arena.

Before we say the big adios this week we'd like to remind everybody, including all first year SPADs, that answers can be dropped off in the box outside the SPAD office in the Phys. Ed. centre, or Room 104 MSR. Here's TRIVIA #14, 'till next week, 2 SPAD lads.

DAVIS CAPTURES TWO GOLD MEDALS

Wendy Davis, 3rd year biology student, blew away her opposition, to lead the Laurentian University Ski Team (LUST) to a strong showing at the Mono Nordic Interdivisional and University cross-country ski race held in Orangeville January 18,19.

With over 30cm of new snow the course held-up well, with over 350 divisional and university skiers competing each day. Saturday, the woman's 10km and mens 15km Free Technique races were held. Davis was the top female skier, finishing first in a time of 33 minutes 28 seconds. Patty Murphy and Shannon Dunn were Laurentians next two top women, finishing in 6th and 8th place respectively.

The mens team was lead by Gareth Jones who finished in 3rd place with a time of 47minutes and 31seconds.

Eric Finstad finished in 5th place. Unfortunately Eric was not racing at his best, due to sickness and was unable to compete on Sunday. Eric's effort was noted by his fellow skiers. Dr. Ken Sidney (team coach, athlete and physiology prof.) aged 40 something and always getting younger, tied LUST'S new top rookie Steven Farrari, finishing in 7th place in 50minutes and 39seconds over the 15km course.

Competition continued on Saturday night at one of Orangevilles local establishments. LUST skiers once again proved their worth by defeating Queens, Carleton and Western in the ultimate slam-dance competition (music by the Clash).

Sunday morning, the Laurentian skiers dawned their Doc. Martin boots, sorry, their ski boots and skis to compete in the Classic Technique events. Our Senior women raced over a 5km course. Again Wendy finished on top, with a time of 17minutes 20seconds. Shannon Dunn and Patty Murphy matched their previous days results with 6th and 8th place finishes. Gareth Jones moved up one position to capture 2nd spot; only two seconds out of first. Steven Farrari and Ken Sidney once again rounded out Laurentians top three skiers, with 8th and 14th place finishes.

Shirely Pommer (variety womens coach) also skied well, winning her respective age class. Other honourable mention goes out to the rest of the LUST skiers; Natalie Farmer, Lori Mezker, Erik Labrose, Greg Watson, Stephan Spencer, Scott Lemon, Andrew Sarrinen and Craig Chivers.

Pizza Hut Athlete of the Week Ken Heinrich

This week's Pizza Hut Athlete of the Week honours go to Ken Heinrich of the Laurentian Voyageur Hockey Team. Ken, a second year Sports Administration student from Ottawa, had another productive weekend on the ice. Ken's strong scoring ability and aggressive style of play was proven once again as he scored two goals and one assist to lead his team to strong performances against Brock and Laurier. Ken was also a member of the Laurentian Voyageur Soccer Team who one the OUAA Championship and placed third in the CIAU Championships.

Congratulations to Ken Heinrich, Laurentian University/Pizza Hut Athlete of the Week.

Adam's Eden

I wrote for Lambda because I love writing, because I am young, because I thought that the paper needed a new perspective. I discovered that a couple people enjoyed my writing, at times, even appreciated it, and these few words, my last for Lambda, are to those people- you who know me a little more than most.

Reflective pause...

Live and be happy always. Don't take any of it seriously because your most potent sense of humour couldn't tackle the hypocrisies, ignorance and stupidity of this world if taken seriously. In the grand scheme of things, laughter and happiness are the only things that will matter in the end, and if you've had these then you'll be there to see the end- which in itself will be funny because you'll realize, as will we all EVENTUALLY, that there is no end, no beginning, only action.

Whether it's true or not is irrelevant, because I'll have lived one helluva happy and joyful life filled with love and peace and inner glow. I wouldn't have hurt anyone and would have in fact given others more room to live their own lives as they would have their lives lived. If I do indeed die one day, no one will be able to point to one day in my life that I would wish removed from my history; I will not have regretted one decision made, nor worried about its outcome, nor felt guilty about its effects.

But since I tend to believe that I always have existed and always will exist, and am here on this planet only as a visitor, as are we all, then my sisters and brothers to whom I am intrinsically connected, all I ask is Why aren't you happy, truly, confidently, glowingly? If you are, then revel in that happiness you filthy animals. If not, Why?

I don't know where I'm going or what I'm going to do. In fact, my slate is now clean, and the possibilities are endless. It seems to be a trend, but nonetheless, I'm pointed westward, and I know I love the ocean. Food and shelter will be taken care of, as things are always taken care of, like the tides or the clouds. When you give in to yourself completely, things become much clearer, and many would be amazed at how simple life is, once you accept that simplicity.

Escapism, irresponsibility, thoughtlessness... There are many terms to describe my decision, but so what if I am irresponsible and immature. So what? It effects no one's life but my own, yet you'll always find those people who will drive daggers into you just to have themselves be understood that you're irresponsible. It's amazing. Caring is one thing but the popular phenomenon of condemnation is incredible. Are these people mad and jealous that they themselves didn't escape when they wanted to?

My reasons for leaving university and my home of Sudbury are simple enough and none of which include belittling learning or education. I do believe that our modern system is shot full of disparities and that too little emphasis is placed on the quality of knowledge, the mind and its potential. However, I do fully intend on continuing my formal education probably out west, and do fully intend on entering the professional world, and on contributing to our society. I am no beatnik bum, roaming the landscape in search of myself. It is precisely because I have already found myself that I leave. I listened and my ego, superego, id, soul, spirit, everyone in my house said go, and the key, I think, is that I listened.

No matter how hard a decision for me this is to leave my family and my home, which includes my friends, no matter how hard it is for me to quit university because of parental expectations and social stigma, no matter, I listened and confident in my instinctive ability, which is just the energy that you and I are made of, I have quit Laurentian, am packing up the things that I want to keep as mine, found enough money for a week's food and hostel, and will start hitching west out of Ontario in a couple of days of this article.

Point of the matter is that brother and sister, if you're not really happy with the way things are, no matter what that may mean, why not try asking yourself if you're doing what you really want to be doing. Then, my key now, be sure to listen. Life is worth living only if you're living it the way you want to live it. That's all. No great secret. It's very simple. You're the only one who's really going to have to judge your life, so, why not get in touch with yourself and start finding out what that really means. The only person you can really be true to is yourself, not your parents, your friends, your lover, no one but you because only you can really know You. So, by process of elimination, the only person you can really make happy is yourself. So why not start now?!

Depending on the magnitude of your required realignment, you may encounter quite a wave of disapproval and discontent. When and if that wave comes, just let go and be propelled by it. Resistance and conflict just encourage negative energy, so do not resist that wave. Very likely it will be you who are the most opposed to your change so just never lose contact with your inner voice. It will never harm you. Do not fear the oncoming change, but enjoy it.

Now that I've soothed and once again dealt with my own fear, I leave you with a few thoughts that were to be articles

1. Remember that you're paying for this damned education, so that if it starts falling horribly short of its mark, you have the power and right to force productive change.

2. Political Correctness has its points but "womyn" who want to change boycott to personcott should ready themselves for an accompanied change of MENstruation to personstruation or even womynstruation.

3. Take care to not keep things under wraps too much. For instance, there have been a couple student suicides and a couple on-campus rapes that not too many people know about. One has to wonder why these striking and awful items of news were kept quiet. Down south, universities would have had all-out campaigns and awareness days. Up north, we have Cher Pierre.

4. Rumours start wars and those who engage in propagating rumours should be dissolved in vats of acid. It is these people, and you know who you are, who have no life and nothing better to do than to talk about someone else. To you, I say, Beware the smell of acid!

Here I say farewell.
Happiness by yours

Adam Lanteigne

Lambda is funded through a direct student levy by the members of the Student's General Association, yet remains editorially autonomous for all University organizations, both student and administrative.

Lambda is a member of Canadian University Press (CUP) and as a member respects and upholds the CUP Statement of Principles and Code of Ethics.

The Lambda Forum is governed by an open letter policy. However, we will not print any material which is deemed racist, sexist, homophobic, libellous, or in bad taste. All letters must bear the author's full name, however, printing of names may be withheld upon request.

Staff membership is open to all members of the Laurentian University community and is contingent upon the publication of three contributions, or fifteen hours of volunteer work per half term.
